Some of the answers are really interesting; others less so. Among my recommendations are:

- "What is this section of road doing in a building site?"
- "Does this tree float?"
- "What is this scratch in the water?"

perma-lien embed enregistrer dorer

[–] Cindoche 33 points il y a 1 an [–] Quhya 12 points il y a 1 an

There was a musical assortment of half-sunken vessels in the way.

perma-lien embed enregistrer parent dorer

[–] [deleted] 3 points il y a 1 an

Then there's the one where she finds "what is there at the end of the road?" and focuses on plants, collects 45 of them, but only mentions once a "ruin", no pictures focusing on what the "ruin" is. I want more, but it peeks out of the trees. http://destinationeurope.info/13.bancao/bancao.html

[–] cndyssly 5 points il y a 1 an

I know, she doesn't give a shit about that cool building.

perma-lien embed enregistrer parent dorer

[–] Boogaby 2 points il y a 1 an

Some of these should get filed under "mildly infuriating."

I still don't really know what the section of road is doing in a building site. I can see that it leads to a parking garage, but the central mystery is unsolved because the on the satellite photo it leads to nowhere in both directions.

perma-lien embed enregistrer parent dorer

[–] poetryspiece 2 points il y a 1 an

Can we ask what the building is? Maybe she will go back?

perma-lien embed enregistrer parent dorer

[–] Giovanny-DaCapo 40 points il y a 1 an how is she financing all that?

perma-lien embed enregistrer dorer

[–] [deleted] 10 points il y a 1 an

Arts funding. She mentions International Film Festival Rotterdam and WP ZIMMER as well as two individuals.

It's really not that expensive to get around Europe. She gets funding from my hometown Rotterdam so assuming she lives here it's:

- 1 hour drive to the Belgian border, 1.5 hours to Antwerp
- 2 hour drive to the German border, 4 hours to Frankfurt, 7 hours to Berlin. A round-trip train ticket to Berlin costs 100 euro.
- 4 hour drive to Paris.
- 10 hour drive to the south of France. A weekend will cost about 100 euro in gas, 50 euro for toll roads, 35 euro for a motel. For the same amount of about 200 euro you can take a night train and sleep on the train.
- A round trip plane ticket to London costs 80 euro. A weekend including train and hotel costs 200 euro.
- A round trip plane ticket to Barcelona, Spain costs 60 euro and 30 euro for a hostel.
- A round trip plane ticket to Stockholm, Sweden costs 100 euro and 20 euro for a hostel.

So any of her trips besides Romania and the south of Italy will have cost her at the most 200 euro.

I was there last summer, and jotted down some notes, copy and pasted here:

- men are very reluctant to make any contact with accompanied women- almost chivalrous. Can be creepy towards unaccompanied women.
- most cars use methane due to petrol shortage (poor management) -only 3 brands of cars: ladas, chevrolets, Daewoo
- a lot of police, checkpoints, but surprisingly polite -bad food, greasy, fried, heavy -a lot of obese people, especially women -people are darker, look more middle Eastern, and are more conservative -most totalitarian country in the region except for Turkmenistan . 'City people'

That said, you don't need a phone with a GPS you can just print out a map and plan on that.

perma-lien embed enregistrer parent dorer

First thing I noticed:

Her dates are inconsistent and unordered which means she isn't using a CMS of any sort, she's manually adding everything and only using html. She's also not using a dynamic layout nor the use of external CSS so any big changes she decides to make with the design in future would have to be manually applied to all the pages she's made.

It'd only take less than an hour to implement the basics of a CMS, it'd help her a lot so that she doesn't have to manually apply things.

perma-lien embed enregistrer parent dorer

[–] webchimp32 3 points il y a 1 an

Doesn't google maps do that? Is post pics to go with the location.

Then all you need is a requester for the empty-of-pictures locations.

perma-lien embed enregistrer parent dorer

[–] mjoonns 3 points il y a 1 an

Google map pics is quite often wrong (location), poor quality pics, don't have enough pics, or no pics at all. For example, I've long searched for and sought out in local Irish forums for this sinkhole, of sorts, but have not been able to find info/pics of it. If someone were visiting the area or lived nearby they could snag some photos of it and maybe talk to locals (there's several farm houses around it) and get more info. It'd be cool to have a subreddit dedicated to stuff like that.

perma-lien embed enregistrer parent dorer

[–] E-liquid 2 points il y a 1 an

That reminds me, this theoretical sub would probably have to say something along the lines of "don't send someone into a deathtrap; be wary of the places people are asking you to look at". You don't want to be looking for a sinkhole and accidentally fall into it, nor do you want to fall afoul of a government installation or some hick with a shotgun and a sense of territorialism.

Not going to lie, if I somehow could get paid for doing something like this, I would take that job in a heartbeat.

Very interesting, I wonder if people will start to help her. This could be something easy to participate in.

Hey Reddit!

Let's play this game locally, everybody in their own city. I can look for things in Vienna, Austria. Plenty of beautiful architecture etc. Bonus points if anyone can point out something Dan Brownesque like secret Freemason signs in public architecture.

Salzburg, Austria checking in!

I guess we would need some fellow players from other countries :D

I'd like to try but as far as I know there's not a lot of cool places here in Guadalajara, Mexico, but if you somehow are interested in one I'll go :)

Better yet, what if you could visit the place yourself via a human proxy rover? This woman's ingenious effort is great for visiting and documenting remote places, but what if a place isn't so remote? What if you wanted to visit a common place but control interaction in that environment? I am flirting with the idea (read: imagining it but not actually lifting a finger to work on it) of a service called 'Proxyfoot'.
